

Coolidge's Tax Plan Arouses The Democrats

President's Refusal To Countenance Another Tax Cut Despite Surplus Incites Democrats Who Oppose Plan To Use Surpluses For Retirement of Public Debt In 25 Years.

Washington, June 22.—President Coolidge's refusal to countenance another tax cut, despite the fact the treasury closes its books for another fiscal year with an enormous surplus of approximately $400,000,000, and another big surplus is in prospect for next year, drew fire today from the Democrats.

It appeared not improbable that the Democrats will take the issue of further reducing taxes to the country in the approaching campaign with the appeal: "Elect a Democratic congress and get a new tax reduction."

The Coolidge-Mellon program, as revealed by President Coolidge last night in his address to the bureau chiefs, and by Secretary Mellon in recent statements, is to maintain federal taxes at their present rates and put whatever surpluses can be managed to the retirement of the public debt. They hope to wipe out this debt, now totalling some $19,000,000,000, in 25 years.

The Democrats view this program with undisguised skepticism and, in some cases, absolute disbelief.

Robinson Charges Juggling.

Senator Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas, for example, has openly charged that Treasury surpluses will be so juggled as to afford the maximum political benefit to the administration whenever the Republicans desire. In support of his contention, he pointed out that when Congress this year slashed taxes far beyond what President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon called "the safety point," the government still closed the year with an enormous surplus.

"We were assured," said Robinson, "by the Secretary of the Treasury that a deficit was probable under the bill passed and would be inevitable if further reductions were made."

"Yet already an enormous surplus is at hand, so that the administration may come forward with a proposal for another reduction in taxes in time to meet requirements of the Republican party for popularity in the presidential election in 1928."

Neither do the Democrats believe it is necessary to try to wipe out the national debt in 25 years.

Liquidation of Public Debt.

Most of the Democrats favor liquidation of the public debt over a longer period, the most commonly suggested being 62 years, the life of the foreign debt agreements. This 62-year-period, they point out, was granted every foreign government owing money to the American Government, out of consideration to the burden borne by foreign taxpayers, and they plan to inquire from hundreds of platforms in the coming campaign why the American taxpayer is to be mustered himself of his burden in 25 years.

The Democrats also question the accuracy of the surpluses in prospect for the next few years. President Coolidge in his speech last night envisioned a surplus of $180,000,000 next year, and a surplus of $20,000,000 the following year.

"If they missed it $300,000,000 this year, what assurance is there they won't miss it $300,000,000 next year?" asked one Democrat, who also pointed out that when the Soldiers Bonus was being opposed both the Treasury and the White House predicted a deficit which never materialized.

Senator Copeland, (D.), of New York, declared the next congress should reduce taxes. He described as "legalized larceny" the federal government's taking more money from the country than is required to operate the government.

Safe and Sound.

On the other hand, Republican leaders contend that the administration program is "the safe and sane one." Treasury surpluses are "sure things," they declare, and a "sizeable surplus could be wiped out in short order should business grow stagnant, or expected payments not materialize. There is no war, they contend, of slashing taxes indiscriminately to conform with an uncorroborated forecast of a surplus when the government may have a bad year, and have to increase taxes again to meet its cost.

"Taxation, either to increase it or reduce it, should be accomplished slowly and surely with a minimum of discomfort and uncertainty to business," is the Treasury dictum.

There is apparently but one thing upon which the Republicans and Democrats generally agree, and that is that it will not be possible to reduce the cost of government very much under its present figures, now $2,400,000,000 this year.

This amounts to about one-third of the total tax bill of the country. Federal, state and local administration for the next year will cost the American people, it is estimated, some $11,000,000,000, the equivalent of $21 per capita.

President Coolidge frankly warned the country not to expect any further material reductions in government expenditures may come. Tax reductions, he said, must come from the state and municipal rates, and state and local taxes have steadily increased since the war, while the federal

Five Children Die in Flames

Father Is On the Point of Death and Two Other Children Are in a Critical Condition—Fire Started by Explosion of Oil Stove.

Troy, N. Y., June 22.—Five children lost their lives in a fire which today destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Aldrich, near Waterford.

Aldrich is on the point of death, and two other children are in a critical condition.

The dead, all of the Aldrich family, are: Mildred, 15; Eleanor, 5; Dorothy, 3; Myrtle, 8; and William, 2.

The fire was started by the explosion of an oil stove. Mrs. Aldrich wrapped her three months' old baby, Seth, in a blanket and dashed for safety, escaping with only minor burns.

Aldrich ran to the room where the other children were sleeping. He snatched two up in his arms and started to carry them out, but he was trapped by the flames, and was almost unconscious when he reached safety, terribly burned, as were the children he carried.

Two older children, those still alive, waited in their room until they could stand the heat no longer, and finally just as the fire reached them, jumped flaming from the second story window. They are now being cared for in the Troy Hospital.

By the time the fire department arrived the house was a mass of flames. Aldrich completed building it only a few weeks ago.

Victory for Wets in Minnesota

St. Paul, Minn., June 22.—The wets won an apparently overwhelming victory over their dry opponents in the race for congressional offices in the Minnesota primary election, returns from 1,850 of the state's 3,589 precincts indicated today.

Modification of the dry law was an outstanding issue in the congressional race in both the Fourth and Eighth districts, and in each of these the Republican "wet" candidates emerged victorious by commanding margins.

Melvin J. Maas, young St. Paul bond salesman, campaigning on a dry law modification platform, received 15,746 votes against 8,586 for Fred B. Snyder, dry candidate who had received endorsement of the Minnesota Anti-Saloon League.

With 80 percent of the returns for the Fourth Minnesota congressional district reported, Representative Oscar E. Keller, veteran member of congress from the fourth district, which includes the city of St. Paul, was trailing with 5,240.

Attempting a political comeback following his defeat in 1924 for reelection to the United States Senate, ex-Senator Magnus Johnson apparently has won the Farmer-Labor nomination for governor over Tom Davis, Minneapolis attorney, by a close margin.

Governor Theodore Christanson is leading Mayor George E. Leach of Minneapolis by 45,009 in the race for the Republican nomination for governor.

SEVERAL CASES BEFORE SHUFELDT IN COURT

M. M. Cashier, a salesman who has been working in Kingston and vicinity since May, was arrested at Saugerties on Monday afternoon on a warrant obtained by Dominick Sotile of No. 187 North street, charging Cashier with attempted grand larceny in the second degree.

According to the information sworn to by Sotile he was engaged by Cashier to do some work and on June 11 was presented with a check for $100 drawn on the Cosmopolitan Bank at Cleveland, Ohio, and signed by Cashier. He deposited the check in a local bank and it was later returned marked "No Funds." This morning Cashier pleaded not guilty, and the hearing was adjourned to Friday. Bail was fixed at $500.

Charles Slater, arrested by Officer Post on a charge of public intoxication, paid a fine of $5. When arrested he had about $50 in cash on his person.

Jadous Chase, arrested by David Rogers of East Union street, on a charge of public intoxication, also paid a $5 fine.

REVERLY ALDERMEN STAGE FIST FIGHT

Reverly, Mass., June 22.—It was a great bout while it lasted—that between Aldermen John A. Brown and Alderman Benjamin F. Wackerl. The arena, according to those who saw it, was the Aldermanic chamber.

Somebody had said something about somebody's friend in the public works department—that's what started it.

Today Wackerl carried a blister under one eye and Brown a bump on his head.

They have just as consistently been enemies as they have been friends.

The reduction of the public debt this year will approximate $425,000,000, which means an annual saving of interest charges of some $25,000,000.

Major Moose and Cadet Point Die In Plane Crash

Army Pilot and West Point Cadet Killed When Biplane Crashes and Burst Into Flames—Were Making a Practice Flight.

East Meadow, N. Y., June 22.—Major William L. Moose, Jr., army pilot, and William Point of Washington, D. C., one of the West Point cadets undergoing aviation schooling at Mitchell Field, were killed instantly today when they crashed on the Cold Stream Golf Links here.

The men were making a practice flight in a De Havilland Army Bi-plane.

Major Moose, who was at the controls, took off from Mitchell Field with Cadet Point, and had been in the air a considerable time before the crash.

The plane was seen to go into a slow tail spin when about 300 feet from the ground, over a clump of trees. It burst into flames immediately after it struck, and was blazing from tip to tip before help arrived. The bodies of Major Moose and Young Point were burned beyond recognition.

From the position of the controls, it was evident, according to officers, that when the plane went into the spin, Major Moose attempted to effect a landing on the golf links, but was too close to the ground to bring the plane out.

Major Moose, a West Point graduate, in 1920 was in command of Mitchell Field, and since then had been in charge of the Air Service Reserve of the Second Corps area. He lived with his wife at Bayside, N. Y.

Cadet Point was the son of Lieutenant W. P. Point, of the Quarter-master's Corps, U. S. A. He was a member of the West Point senior class taking instruction in aviation.

DRINK-CRAZED MAN STABS TWO WOMEN

Boston, June 22.—Two women were stabbed in the Florence Cafe early today when a drink-crazed man, known as "Tony," went mad when the management refused to serve him food.

The man lunged a fork into the arm of Mrs. Ponsi Sobol, 22, a waitress, and into the side of Miss Lillian Green, 36, who sought to interfere. The fork struck a corset steel and this saved Miss Green's life.

With both women lying helpless and bleeding on the floor and with other patrons cowering in corners, the stabber easily made his escape. The injured women were rushed to a city hospital.

IDENTIFY SLAIN MAN AS JOSEPH VEAL

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 22.—Police today identified the body of a man found on the Pelham golf course as that of Joseph Veal, of Lexington, Ky.

Veal had been shot through the heart, and there were three other bullet holes in the body, all surrounded by powder burns, indicating that the gun was held close against the man when the trigger was pulled.

No identifying papers were found yesterday when the body was discovered, but today friends of the dead man appeared. In his socks police found two rolls of bills totalling $600.

They doubt that robbery was the motive, and state that they will be able to clear up the murder soon.

FRED SCHADD ARRESTED FOR THE THIRD TIME IN CITY

Fred Schadd of Poughkeepsie, a plumber now employed at Tannersville, was arrested Sunday night by the police and given a suspended sentence in police court on Monday.

After Schadd had left the city hall word was received that he was wanted on a larceny charge in Tannersville. It was alleged that Schadd had stolen some plumbing tools. Later in the day Schadd was picked up by Sergeant Phinney and turned over to State Trooper Allen and taken to Tannersville.

MILK LENGLEN AGAIN DEFEATS MARY K. BROWNE

Wimbledon, Eng., June 22.—Miss Lenglen has again turned Mary K. Browne of California back.

Browne defeated the Californian and former national champion this afternoon in the first round of the Wimbledon tournament, 6-2, 6-3.

Miss Browne put up a stiff fight and gave the French star a better battle than she did in Paris ten days ago.

Konakoff Charges Nerve.

On the petition of Henry Klein, attorney at law, County Judge Joseph M. Joyce has authorized Theodore Thomas Konakoff of Kingston to change his name to Theodore Thomas Kewal in place of his present name on July 24, 1926, upon his complying with the provisions of the civil rights law of the state of New York, and after filing and having recorded an affidavit of his compliance with the requirements of the law, and after July 24, 1926, he and after July 24, 1926, he is known by the name which he is authorized to assume and by no other name.

CONDITION OF CHIEF JUSTICE FAST IMPROVED

Washington, D. C., June 22.—The condition of Chief Justice William Howard Taft, who has been confined to his home for several weeks, was reported somewhat improved today.

The Justice is reported to have left today for his summer home at Mar-a-Lago, Fla., Canada, but the continued illness of the Chief Justice has forced the postponement of the departure for another week.

Women's Day at Catholic Congress

Six Thousand Nuns Sing Responses to Mass Celebrated at Soldiers Field and Attended by a Record Crowd.

Chicago, June 22.—Today was women's day at the Twenty-eighth Eucharistic Congress.

By the thousands they trooped to Soldiers' Field to take part in the greatest religious gathering America ever has known. Young girls, mothers with babes in their arms, stooped grandmothers, all with one purpose—The adoration of the Holy Eucharist as the exemplification of the body and blood of Christ.

When the Mass started 200,000 persons were packed into the field, and a crowd estimated at more than 500,000, greater than that of yesterday was spread over Grant Park adjacent.

A broiling sun, in contrast to the threatening clouds of yesterday, and an almost total absence of breeze, resulting in heavy casualties among the crowd both outside and within the stadium. Ten nuns fainted when the throng rushed the gates at the north end of the field and forced members of a police cordon to climb the fence to escape. Twenty other women fainted in the crush, and scores were injured.

At the Eighth Street bridge, leading to the field, more than sixty women fainted in a period of an hour and a half, and similar scenes, although of less magnitude, occurred at all other viaducts near the stadium.

It was woman's day, but the dazzling demonstration, not so great as that of yesterday, but impressive just the same, was not confined to women, for the gates were thrown open to all and thousands of men who failed to get into the stadium yesterday, today marched into the enclosure to get a close-up view of the huge altar at which Masses are being said.

The presiding dignitary today was Cardinal O'Donnell of Boston.

Pinchot Paid The Bills, Says W. C. T. U. Head

Governor Pinchot Used The W. C. T. U. As An Auxiliary Campaign Committee.

Washington, June 22.—Governor Gifford Pinchot used the Pennsylvania Women's Christian Temperance Union as an auxiliary campaign committee in the $3,000,000 senatorial primary, it was revealed to the senate slush fund committee today by Mrs. Ella George, of Beaver Falls, Pa., the state president of the organization.

The Union sent out speakers urging Pinchot's nominations, and three times broadcast circular letters in its behalf while throwing all its influence to his support. Pinchot paid the bills, Mrs. George said.

The Union sent Pinchot a bill for $712.84 for the letters sent out in his behalf, said Mrs. George, and the governor paid it.

The organization also supported John S. Fisher for governor, she added.

"We have 47,112 women members and thousands of men are honorary members," said Mrs. George.

"Do you oppose candidates for office whom you feel are opposed or inimical to prohibition?" Senator Reed, (D) of Missouri, asked.

"Yes."

"Do you employ speakers against such candidates?"

"Yes."

"Do you pay these speakers?"

"Yes."

"Do you send out literature opposing or supporting candidates?"

"Yes."

"Did you do that in the last campaign in Pennsylvania?"

"Yes."

"Whom did you support?"

"Governor Pinchot and Mr. Fisher."

"How much did you spend in the last campaign?"

"Not one cent because Governor Pinchot paid the speakers himself."

Wins Moral Victory.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union held then won a moral victory over Chairman Reed.

"Do you mind if I smoke?" Reed asked the witness.

"Well," said Mrs. George.

"Then I won't do it if it is offensive to you," said Reed.

"No, go ahead if it gives you any pleasure," she urged.

"I'll just lay the cigar aside," Reed said.

When Mrs. George told of the Union sending out Pinchot literature, Reed asked:

"Did Pinchot pay for these letters?"

"Yes, he paid for all of them."

Reed questioned Mrs. George at length about the $250,000 Pinchot "enforcement fund." She said only about $130,000 had been raised to help the governor enforce the prohibition laws. Pinchot, she added, created a separate bureau to handle the fund, outside the state government.

"We went to the state attorney general for an opinion and he said it was legal," said Mrs. George.

"What advice did he give you?"

He said that "it was voluntary and no one had to contribute, the fund was entirely legal."

Sent Treasurer $121,000.

Mrs. Leah Cobb Marlon, of Emporium, Pa., custodian of the Pinchot enforcement fund, came next. Reed questioned her about the $40,000 not accounted for in the April 6 report.

"Where is that $40,000?" asked Reed.

"I have $5,526 on hand," said Mrs. Marlon.

"Where is the rest of it?"

"All but $5,526 ought to be in the hands of Charles J. Rhoads of Philadelphia."

Mrs. Marlon explained that Rhoads was treasurer of the bureau created by Pinchot to carry out the enforcement program.

"You don't often send him such large sums?"

"I sent him $20,000 at the outset," said Mrs. Marlon.

The witness said she also sent Rhoads $15,000 on December 1, 1925; $25,000 on July 21, 1924; $20,000 on December 5, 1924; $5,000 on April 25, 1925; $2,500 on June 3, 1925; $7,000 on December 23, 1925; $4,500 on May 1, 1926; $12,000 on May 24, 1926.

"That's $121,000 at all," she added.

"The fund is subject to a receipt as expended in the regular way."

Asked for More Money.

"What did you send him $12,000 on May 24 after having him $4,500 on May 1?"

"He asked for more on May 6, but I had the fund tied up, and couldn't let it be converted at once," the witness said.

"What sort of expense did you have in May of this year that required so much money?"

"I don't know of any but that we wanted Mr. Rhoads to come to the state capital."

"Was there any reason why he needed $12,000 on May 24, except that an election had been held in the meantime?"

"The election was held in the meantime," said Mrs. Marlon.

"I never had any suspicion that a portion of this money, at least a part of it, was being used for other things," she said.

Jail and Fines for Men and Women

Inmates and Visitors Taken in Raid on House at Ardona Sentenced by Justice of the Peace Dunsbarrie—Man and Wife Held for Grand Jury.

Adolph Buttmers and Eunice, his wife, were held to await the action of the grand jury when arraigned before Justice of the Peace George Dunsbarrie Monday on a charge of maintaining a disorderly house at Ardona in the town of Plattekill. The place was raided Saturday night by Sergeant Lockheart and Troopers and nine arrests were made. All were brought to the jail.

Irene Corwin, who was also mixed up in the raid on the Cashdollar place at Jenkinstown some time ago, and who was held as a material witness for some time in that case, was given 60 days in the county jail. Rose Cronk, another inmate of the place, was given a six months' sentence in the county jail and the sentence was suspended. William Tabbs, charged with being a disorderly person, was given 30 days in jail. William Chapman, who was in the place at the time of the raid, was fined $5. Ellis Carey, another visitor, was fined $5 and given 30 days in the county jail but the jail sentence was suspended. Arthur LaForge was given six months in jail and the sentence suspended.

The two girls and five men were all charged with being disorderly persons.

Criminal Cases In County Court

Complaining Witness Shows Leniency In Assault Case—Other Cases Disposed of by Judge Fowler Monday Afternoon.

Harold O. Stimms, indicted by the grand jury on a charge of assault and attempted rape alleged to have been committed in the town of Marlborough, by reason of the lenient attitude of the complaining witness will not stand trial on the charge. In county court Monday afternoon District Attorney Traver stated that the complaining witness in the case had written requesting that the matter be dropped. The indictment was dismissed by the court.

Joseph Alecca of Kingston entered a plea of guilty to the charge of assault, third degree. Andrew J. Cook appeared for him. Judge Fowler imposed a fine of $100 which was paid and also six months in the county jail, the jail sentence being suspended during good behavior, and the court warned him that one of the conditions of the good behavior was to keep strictly away from his wife.

William Harnen, who was given a 10 months' sentence in the county jail last December for taking money from the McFarlane place of business on the Strand, appeared in court and his sentence was modified and he was discharged from jail. At the time sentence was imposed last December, Judge Fowler informed him that his conduct would govern his term in jail; if his conduct was good, at the June term of county court his sentence would be modified. Chris J. Flanagan appeared for Harnen.

The case of The People against George Atkins was put over the term on account of the inability to locate a witness.

THAW FURIOUS, BLAMED WHITE.

"Thaw was furious when he learned of it. His party had gone to smash. I have been told that Harry flew into a rage."

Miss Nesbitt said Thaw got over his anger after a day or two and called the girl up. But Miss Nesbitt said, the girl never got over the insult. She

LIVING BEYOND OUR MEANS.

Apart from motor omnibuses there is in use in this country one private car for every six and a half of our population, while in England only about one person in a hundred owns an automobile. An article in the London Economist (reprinted in our Living Age) attributes this difference chiefly to our enormously prevalent plan of installment payment for large purchases. This deferred payment or installment plan of business creates a fictitious prosperity. It is claimed, and thus becomes a species of inflation which can ill afford to stand a strain or setback in trade. For the consumer is "pawning his future" to stimulate output and tolling at his daily task, not to build up laborious savings as future capital, but to pay for the luxuries he is at present wearing out.

Therefore when the inevitable trade reaction arrives the United States must face it "with a great industrial program in full swing, relying on a body of consumers who are actually in debt to their manufacturers—consumers who are so far from having the accumulations of thrift to draw upon that they are still in pawn for their past luxuries." This view of the London Economist is logically put and is highly suggestive. Undoubtedly the man who "pawns his future" for present and perishable luxuries is living beyond his means, and to do that is to invite disaster. Unquestionably millions of Americans are now so doing, but at the same time an encouraging factor in the situation is provided by the reported increase of savings bank deposits.

WHICH SYSTEM IS BEST?

Our tariff system, which has been made the plaything of politics, but which has protected American industries, American workmen and American farms against the invasions of destructive foreign competition, has justified its existence.

There are two kinds of tariff, one for protection and one for revenue. The American tariff is of the protective type although it produces increasing revenue. A revenue producing tariff is levied for the sole purpose of raising funds. This latter kind of a tariff can be witnessed in England which is supposed to be a free trade country, but which has in reality a much higher per capita tariff tax than the United States. Under the English system the products of the English workmen are largely unprotected by a tariff and at the mercy of world competition, while the goods consumed in largest amounts by English workmen are subject to a tariff tax for the purpose of raising federal income.

This is just the reverse of the American system which admits commodities we cannot produce, but through a reasonable duty on certain foreign products, which if admitted free would destroy American industries, agriculture, wages and hours, protects our resources and workmen and makes our nation self-supporting.

The aim of our country should be the useful occupation of all the people and of all their wealth to make them prosperous, and administration of the government with such efficiency and economy that it will make the smallest possible draft on the people's income and prosperity.

IRONIC TRIBUTE.

Writers for the Sesquicentennial number of Vanity Fair pay but ironic tribute to "the fathers" of the republic. Sherwood Anderson notes that in former times "you had to breathe softly when you spoke" of them: "Such a sacred lot of men, doing such a sacred thing. Every one noble and grand—doing noble, grand things—outshining all the rest of mankind. It makes your bones ache to think of it." But in the present period of greater freedom and frank inquiry Mr. Anderson's bones are caused to ache less for critical histories are being written in which "we are finding out something of truth."

In the same number another contributor dies "something of truth" out of the household account books of "dear old Father West who told lowed Jonathan Edwards as minister in Stockbridge." It seems that this pious man allowed himself a pint of rum every day. "Sunday, of course, he bought none, but every Saturday he bought a quart!" This record may not cause Mr. Anderson's bones to ache, but in the present age of such great advance over that of "the fathers" it is not unlikely to make his mouth water.

The claim of the Young Turks that they are Americanizing their country is in a measure confirmed by the news that Turkish bandits held up a bank automobile, killed the guards and made off with about three million dollars.

GAS ON THE STOMACH.

One of the commonest ailments with which mankind suffers is pain in the stomach.

It may be slight or severe, present every day or after every meal, or only at odd times.

It has been generally agreed that most of these cases are due to "acid stomach," and the old fashioned remedy, baking soda, certainly gives wonderful relief.

One of our older professors in medicine has been pointing out to his brethren that a great many of these cases can be cured with a little sensible advice.

He tells them that it is really an irritation of the nerve centers that causes the pain, and that imprisoned "gas" causes a spasm of the stomach and the tube going down to it, that is the oesophagus. If the spasm passes away the gas is belched up and relief obtained.

Unfortunately these nervous folks, after belching up gas, immediately swallow more air, and thus keep up the distress.

This type is usually thin, and no amount of "feeding" seems to fatten them up.

Relief from anxiety, or a long holiday, increases their weight and strength. He stated further that some of these cases were due to old inflammatory conditions in the gall bladder or appendix. Also that eye strain, and ear, teeth and tonsil conditions were frequently the cause. All these conditions irritate the nerves that supply all the digestive organs, and hence the stomach is the part that tells the patient about it by means of the pain.

To relieve the spasms, lessen the activity, and wash out the stomach, he suggests our old friend baking soda, a quarter to half a teaspoonful in a glass of water an hour before meals; the water at the same time promoting the excretion of waste products in the blood through the kidneys.

The diet should be restricted, and only one cupful of liquid allowed with each meal.

He stated further that if the physician would point out to the patient that there was no organic condition, no possibility of cancer, ulcer or anything else, and that if the directions as to sleep, food, and outdoors were followed out, he was sure to get better, the patient would immediately be a long way toward complete recovery.

While all this is not new, it is gratifying to get this same advice from one of our most eminent professors of medicine.

KINGSTON BEAUTY PAGEANT GETS OFF TO FLYING START.

The Beauty Pageant now being staged at Reade's Kingston Theatre drew a large crowd Monday night and pleased the audience. Each girl received a round of applause as she made her appearance. The pretty ankle and limb contest was won by Helen Conlin, second prize went to Edna Stout. Prizes are offered each night in this contest, which is staged in addition to the Beauty Pageant.

Announcement was made that a Ladies' Wood Sawing Contest will be staged on Thursday and is open to every lady, regardless of size, age or beauty. Those wishing to enter should enroll with the manager.

Friday evening a style show will be staged by the People's Store. Considerable interest is being shown in the Beauty Pageant and it looks like a close race for the honors. The Kingston Venus, a two beautiful living curbs have also been donated by Safford and Scudder to be awarded to the winners; in addition everybody participating will receive a prize.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

Henry Hudson, Navigator and His Coverer, Cast Adrift at Sea and Abandoned, June 22, 1611.

Henry Hudson, the English navigator, in the year 1607, sailed from London in a small vessel, with only ten men and a boy, to discover the Northeast Passage, and proceeded beyond 80° north latitude. In a second voyage he landed at Nova Zembla, but could get no farther eastward.

We find this navigator at the age of forty years in command of the ship "Half Moon," of Amsterdam, a vessel of eighty tons, owned by the Dutch East India Company. He sailed from Amsterdam April 4, 1609, with a motley crew of sixteen English and Dutch sailors. Robert Juet, who had been his mate in the previous voyage, now acted as his clerk, and fortunately kept a curious journal of the voyage.

Again the ice-barrier prevented his entrance to the polar seas. Determined not to return fruitless to Amsterdam, he sailed southward, discovered the American continent off the coast of Maine, then sailed southward as far as the Capes of Virginia, touching at Cape Cod on the way.

Returning, he discovered Delaware Bay, and early in September entered the Raritan Bay, south of Staten Island, and afterwards entered the present harbor of New York. From the north flowed a large river into New York Bay, which he believed would afford a northwest passage. Hudson sailed up the stream as far as the present Albany, and in small boats several miles farther.

Returning to the sea, he sailed for England, where the unworthy monarch on England's throne detained him as an English subject, but Hudson cutwitted his sovereign, by sending the story of his discoveries to his Amsterdam employers by a trusty hand.

Hudson returned to the employ of the Muscovy company, and under their auspices undertook his last voyage. On April 22, 1610, he sailed with twenty-three men and his young son, John, on the "Discoverie," a ship of seventy tons.

Rounding the north of Scotland, they sailed through the Orkney and Faroe Islands touching at Iceland early in May. Here the continued dissatisfaction of the crew grew into serious discussions, which Hudson could appease only with great difficulty. This violence and disorder increased as the voyage continued, several ill-judged acts of discipline on Hudson's part only serving to aggravate the dissatisfaction.

None the less, Hudson was determined to continue his way and, having doubled the southern coast of Greenland in June, he proceeded to steer northeast toward the American continent.

The summer was spent in exploring the extensive bay since known by his name, and winter having come upon them before the work was completed, they were obliged to remain there. The supply of provisions was rapidly being exhausted, and their daily subsistence was derived almost entirely from the wild fowl which congregated about them in great flocks.

This supply of food vanished in the return of spring, and Hudson indignantly divided the small remnant of provisions brought from England into equal parts and distributed it to the crew.

When the ship was once more freed from the ice, the malcontents in the crew, headed by the former mate and boatswain, whom Hudson had displaced, mutilated and took command of the ship.

On June 22, 1611, his ungrateful crew placed Hudson with his son, two loyal officers, Arnold Ludlow and Shadrack Fanna, and five sailors, Philip Staffe, Thomas Woodhouse, Adam Moore, Henry King and Michael Bate, who were sick and blind with the scurvy, in a small boat. The compassionate carpenter of the ship furnished them with a fowling piece, some powder and shot, some meal and an iron pot. They were then towed by the ship out of the ice-floes to the open sea, cut adrift and abandoned to their fate. They perished in the great waste of waters, which bearing the brave navigator's name is his tomb and his monument.

Years afterward, Abacue Pricket, one of the conspirators, confessed the crime, and an expedition was sent from England to search for Hudson and his companions, but no trace of them was ever found.

Nutty Natural History

By RUTH MURPHY.

THE THEODORIAN BOOLMOOZ.

The boolmoos was discovered by the late President Roosevelt during one of his hunting expeditions in Northern Michigan and one slightly tamed individual was taken by him to the Republican convention in 1912, where it broke loose and knocked things about quite generally. Being unable to control it, he turned the animal over to the curators of the American Museum of Nutty Natural History who promptly skinned and stuffed it, thus establishing the most satisfactory method of managing boolmooses. The female of the species is called a boolmewer, but having no horns, she is no more deadly than the male.

The building of the boolmoos is largely a matter of peanuts. The head and body are both double peanuts, and the antlers are halves of shute peanut shells trimmed around the edge with an oyster scalloper. The legs, of course, are toothpicks, and the tail and bell under the chin are shutes. Popcorn kernels form the ears, and the facial expression is pea and ink.

SUMMER DAYTIME FROCKS AFFECT THE TWO-PIECE MODE

"PRETTY" and "Practical"—united they stand and divided they fall—in the requirements that spell success for daytime or sports frocks. The most athletic of young persons looks with disdain upon sports togs that have no charm of styling, no matter how practical they may be for her needs. It is the same with daytime dresses of all sorts; even in house dresses prettiness and good style are just as essential as durability and comfort.

We have with us this spring—morning, noon or night, for every character of dress, the two-piece mode. It is one of the new whims for evening wear, but finds its best expression in daytime and sports frocks. All the pretty printed fabrics are made up in skirt and jumper styles, often with printed and plain goods combined. Plain skirts with printed blouses, for summer days and resort wear, have taken on new interest because of new colors and novel patterns in printed silks and other printed fabrics. Skirts of plain materials are either plaited or plain, or show the introduction of plaits at the sides—perhaps at only one side. The jumper dress, in printed materials, is a promising aspirant for favor and is shown here in a printed crepe with ribbon tie. In some of the plaited skirt and printed blouse combinations, very high colors are used in the skirts, as bright red, yellow or blue, with blouses printed in harmonizing colors. But there are others in pastel colors, as light pink, blue, lavender, that are just as good style. There is a casual style about the two-piece mode that makes it informal and ideal for summer afternoons.

Eleanor Gunn On Fashions

Organdie and Crochet Trimmings Are Entries in Sports Events and Stand a Chance of Success Despite Their Natural Handicap.

Imagine an organdie-trimmed sports frock. The material hardly seems appropriate for a vigorous outdoor career, yet it is among the novelties offered, and one which will appeal to the veranda variety of folk.

Taffeta, wisecracks tell us, is responsible for the re-entry of organdie, the two materials having an old and socially recognized affinity. There is a great deal in common in their crispness, a sort of impersonal quality delightful when the thermometer registers at so high a pitch that close proximity, even of one's apparel, is an irritation. Inconsistencies are often delightful, so when a designer cleverly combines silk, or even wool, crepe, with organdie and crepe, our hats, even the new, wide-brimmed ones, are off to her. The effectiveness of crocheted trimming has been established for some time, especially for crepe de chine, still the most popular of all silks for sports wear, although there are gorgeous sports things and some satin-faced crepes, rajahs and novelties which deserve polite consideration.

Crepe de chine has the steadfast quality of an old friend and may be relied on with a certainty. Bois de rose, all flesh, coral and geranium shades and beige, almond green and poudre blues offer themselves in infinite variety and effectiveness. One wonders sometimes in looking about what has happened to the vogue of gray which so many predicted. Beige is apparently quite self-effacing enough for those who demand neutrality in background so their accessories may be the more striking in color.

K. G. & E. Nosed Out Socony, 6-5

The Kingston Gas & Electric defeated the Socony team at the Athletic Field Monday evening, 6 to 5. Hank Cragan pitched for the Oilmen and allowed the Gasmen nine hits and six runs, but a little faster fielding by his teammates would have helped him a great deal. He fanned nine of the opposing batters.

Crispell started the game for the Gasmen, and he troubled the Oilmen until the fifth inning when he became wild. He was yanked out and Van Aken took his place. The two pitchers allowed but six hits.

McLean helped the Oilmen in the first inning by dropping Shultis's fly. Hasbrouck walked. Kline hit a Texas League to center field, and Hasbrouck was thrown out at second by Kline. Shultis scored on Crispell's wild throw to third base.

The Gasmen had men on third in the first and second innings, but they were unable to score. In the third inning Crispell hit one over first base, and circled the bases as the fielders were looking for the ball under the automobiles. Hoffman walked and stole second. He scored on McLean's scratch hit. Burr struck out. McLean stole second and third, and scored as Sickler was being thrown out at first. Disch struck out. The three runs put the Gasmen in the lead, 3-1.

Shultis got a base hit in the fifth after Hyatt had struck out. Hasbrouck then out to Sickler. Kline, Cragan and Williams walked, scoring Shultis. Crispell being unable to locate the plate. Manager McLean sent him to the showers, putting Van Aken in his place. Bradley, the first man to face Van Aken, hit to left field, Kline and Cragan scoring. Roosa was thrown out at first. The score: 4 to 3.

The Oilmen didn't hold the lead long for the Gasmen scored three in their half, putting them in the lead 6-4. Hoffman singled to left field, and McLean struck out. Burr also singled to left field and scored with Hoffman on Sickler's triple to right field, the fielder being slow in playing the ball. Disch singled to left field, scoring Sickler. Kline hit out to Cragan.

In the sixth the Oilmen scored one on Sickler's error of omission. Robinson doubled to left field and took third on Burr's boot. Hoffman cut Shultis down at second on a squeeze play. Robinson scoring as Sickler was running Shultis back to first base. Sickler forgot about home plate until it was too late to get the man. That ended the scoring for both teams.

Slow fielding of the ball and poor base running by the Oilmen robbed Cragan of another game.

The Gasmen seem to have a hobby in beating Cragan by the score of 6-5, this being the second game in a row.

Hasbrouck was dreaming in the first inning when Kline hit the ball to center field. The play helped to stop Socony's rally.

Good catches were made by Bradley, Williams and Kline. Kline's catch robbed Kline of a hit.

Both runners were safe when Sickler pulled a boner in the sixth inning.

The Oilmen helped the Gasmen make a triple and a homer on singles by their slow fielding.

Both the catchers, Hoffman and Bradley, played a hard game and supported the pitchers in fine style.

The Silk Mills and U. & D. play tonight.

Tagging Major League Bases

It took the Reds sixteen innings to subdue the Cubs, 6 to 5, and retain their lead in the National League scramble. The Reds twice tied the score with a two-run rally in the ninth and twelfth innings.

Pittsburgh took a strangle hold on second place by outslugging the Cardinals in a ding-dong game, 13 to 11. Ten pitchers got into the fray but none of them were heard bragging about it.

The Giants smothered the Phillies, 10 to 3, facing Clarence Mitchell for eighteen hits. Terry and Frisch got homers.

Boston won from Brooklyn, 8 to 7, in eleven innings, but lost the second game, 6 to 4. Dazzy Vance was hit freely in the first game, but was not charged with the defeat.

The Indians beat the White Sox, 5 to 2, and knocked the pale horse out of second place. Joe Shaute pitched a strong game while his mates made merry with Alphonse Thomas.

The Athletics nosed out the Red Sox in the eleventh, 7 to 6, on Rigney's error. The Sox gave Ehmske, their former ace, a thorough lacing while Baby Doll Jacobson, who came to Boston in the Ehmske deal, starred at bat with four hits, including a homer.

Warner's third hit of the day enabled the Tigers to down the Browns in the tenth, 5 to 4. Wells getting the decision over Zachary.

Showdown in National League

National Cardinals Will Meet Pittsburgh Today in Short Series—Strength of Clubs Should Be Decided in Next Two Weeks.

New York, June 22.—After weeks of indecisive jockeying, the inevitable exposure of strength and weakness among the National League contenders is due for an airing in St. Louis, starting today, when the Cardinals and Pirates will meet in the first of a three-game series. The next two weeks will have an abiding effect on the pennant race.

They will show, for example, whether the Cards' recent pace, the sensation of all baseball, was built on a foundation of concrete or cream puffs. The writer inclines to the former theory.

The club, of course, can't hope to sustain the .917 pace it carried through the stunned east. But, otherwise, everything points to the Cardinals being a permanent contender. Never a good road club in the past, they won eleven out of twelve in this section. That's one favorable sign. Another is the fact that pitching has brought the club along. Not hitting.

When Hornsby rises above .340, as he must, and Bottomley climbs back in the .300 class, which is almost as certain, that same pitching will be supplemented by something it obviously lacked when the outfit ran riot through the eastern field. Hornsby is sixty points and Bottomley a hundred points below normal and, while one or the other may be in for an off year, it is highly unlikely that both will suffer a simultaneous reaction.

If one or both improve as they should, the Cards and, perforce, the pitching of Sherdel, Rhem, Keen and Haines will benefit accordingly. However, the proposition will be taken out of the field of theory

Pinchot Paid
The Bills

Need asked.
"Have you a statement of the disbursements made?"

$100,000 in "Revolving Fund."

Mrs. George's statement showed that $101,480 had been paid into a "revolving fund" from August 1, 1923, to April 6, 1926, and $100,397 paid out in disbursements over the same period.

The $100,397 spent on Pinchot's "law enforcement" program included $34,470 in salaries; $8,577 in telephone calls and telegrams; $20,459 for investigating officers and $17,408 for the travelling expenses of investigators, according to Mrs. George's report.

The fund was handled, she added, by Louis S. Graham, a former district attorney of Beaver county. Pinchot made him a special assistant attorney general to handle the fund.

Under the organization created by Pinchot, Mrs. George said, special investigators were employed to get evidence of dry law violations.

"There was a force created to go out and get information and that force was appointed by the governor," asked Reed.

"Yes, but I do not know whether these investigators were given state commissions."

$40,000 Now on Hand.

Reed pointed out that the Women's Christian Temperance Union had raised $130,900 and spent only $91,611 on the law enforcement program.

"That leaves $40,000 unaccounted for," said Reed.

"What became of that money?"

"The money is only turned over to the fund from time to time," said Mrs. George. "The rest of the money is in the hands of Mrs. Leah Cobb Marion, the custodian of the fund."

"Do you understand there is $40,000 now on hand?"

"Yes."

CANADA MAY WITHDRAW FROM LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Ottawa, Ont., June 22.—Possibility of Canada's withdrawal from the League of Nations was being widely discussed in parliamentary circles here today as the result of a heated debate in the Canadian Senate yesterday.

The example of the United States together with the heavy cost involved in maintaining the membership were said to be the chief factors which were influencing Canadian politicians to work for withdrawal.

Senator Sir George Foster, in the course of yesterday's session, requested that the league question be thrown open for debate.

Senator Casgrain remarked that if the Senate snatched a free evening it might have a "pleasant time talking about the League of Nations, ere it dies a natural death."

An influential group in the Senate is reported sharpening its axe to end Canada's membership in the league largely because of the heavy expense.

Bandits Rob Messengers.

St. Louis, June 22.—Three bandits, operating in a motor car, held up two messengers for the Union-Edison Trust Company in front of the bank here today, obtained $14,000 in cash and escaped.

Financial and Commercial

New York, June 22.—Stocks of the railroads and railroad equipment companies led the way to slightly higher prices in the stock market today.

Atlantic Coast Line led off with a gain of 4 points, and advances of 1 to 3 points were scored in Rock Island, Lehigh Valley, Atchafalaya, Chicago Northwestern, Erie, etc. Buying of the rails accompanied reports that the Van Sweringen would soon make a constructive statement with respect to the revised Nickel Plate consolidation program.

Pullman Company sold at the highest price in ten years when the common stock pushed above 183 in active trading. General Railway Signal, Canton Axle and the locomotive companies' stocks sold higher on announcement by several of the large railroad systems of their intention to add substantially to their equipment of cars and engines this fall.

The pool specialties were permitted to lag behind the balance of the market. Textile stocks made a better showing, though there was little in the activity of the textile markets to encourage buying of the stocks. Radio Corporation was well bought and sold up 2 points to 48 1/2. Copper stocks were in demand at slightly higher prices and baking stocks were also on the active list.

Auto Collision Ends in Court

After criminal cases had been disposed of Monday afternoon in Ulster county court, a civil action brought by Alphonsus Brown against William Marcus was taken up for trial. The action grows out of an automobile collision at the corner of Broadway and St. James street on June 1, 1922.

Brown, who is a farmer at Marlborough and who was operating his milk delivery truck on that day, claims that Marcus came up Broadway at a fast rate of speed and collided with his car which was proceeding out of East St. James street from the right. At the time Brown was wet from a recent sprinkling and the plaintiff claims that Marcus was driving his Ford truck at an excessive speed. Brown seeks to recover $150 for damage to his car and loss of use of the car.

The defendant claims that the accident was due to Brown's carelessness. At the time of the accident Brown, the defendant claims, was coming slowly out of East St. James street and should have stopped his car. Marcus claims he was coming up Broadway and was in the intersection. Marcus claims he was coming out of the side street and side-swiped the Marcus car and then ran across the street.

Van Etten & Cook appear for plaintiff and Chris J. Flanagan for defendant.

PORT EWEN.

Port Ewen, June 22.—H. H. Vincent and William Sleight, painters and decorators, are painting the residence and grocery store of Harry Jump on Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Howe and daughter, Dorothy, and Mrs. Ganthur of West Englewood, N. J., spent the week end with Mr. Howe's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howe, on Main street.

Mrs. Frank Wood of Ellenville is visiting her daughter, Mrs. A. H. Short, on Main street.

Bernard Tucker of New York city is spending a few days at his home on Broadway.

A June dance under the auspices of Esopus Council, No. 42, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, will be held in Pythian Hall, Friday evening, June 25. A good time is assured all who attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Mead Davis of Main street and Mrs. Davis's sister, Mrs. Wells, of Kingston, who have been spending a few days at Dunellen, N. J., have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lampman and daughter, Rosamond, Mrs. Irving Merwin of Kingston and Mrs. Ada Hogan of Virginia spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hotelling on Bayard street.

Mr. and Mrs. George Radcliffe of Hensonsville, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Freer on Green street, have returned home.

A cafeteria supper will be served in the Methodist Church house Thursday, June 24, at 5:30 o'clock until all are served. The appetizing menu has been announced. This supper is under the auspices of the official board.

Odds and Ends

The Ahavath Israel Auxiliary will hold a card party Thursday evening at the meeting rooms, Spring and Wurts street.

The regular meeting of the Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. will be held at the club rooms on Post street Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock. All members are urged to attend.

"The Country Minister."

The Home Bureau unit of Hurley will present "The Country Minister" Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Hurley Reformed Church.

Railway Mileages

The Russian state railways have the greatest mileage. If all the rail ways there are operated as a single system, next probably the Canadian National, with an operating mileage of 22,500, and a total trackage of 26,000 miles; not including a considerable mileage which it operates under lease. The Canadian National track would more than belt the earth at the equator. Next comes probably the Canadian Pacific with an operating mileage of 14,000 and a trackage of 18,000 miles; not including a considerable interest in several companies some American, which operate over 3,000 miles. With its subsidiaries the C. P. R. controls an operating mileage not far short of that of the C. N. R.

Volcano Believed Dead

All of the islands of the Hawaiian group are essentially of volcanic origin. Including small islands and rocks or shoals there are twenty of them. Only nine are large enough to be inhabited and only one, Hawaii, still possesses volcanoes which are active.

In the latter part of the eighteenth century a third volcano on the island of Hawaii was still active. This was Mauna Loa, a mountain which still possesses some hot springs and other signs of living volcanoes, but which ceased its last lava flow in 1800.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Joseph's Church on Sunday afternoon when Miss Margaret G. Castor of No. 7 Washington avenue and Clarence W. Perry of No. 17 Staples street were united in marriage by the Rev. Eugene A. Duggan. The bride was very sweet in a white crepe de meteor gown trimmed with white silk lace, and tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of white roses and wauwatonia. Her sister, Frances E. Castor, was maid of honor. She was dressed in white georgette crepe with pastel shades and carried a large bouquet of snapdragons to match. Robert Perry, brother of the groom, was best man. Josephine Perry of Brooklyn, a niece of the groom, was the lovely little flower girl. She was dressed in pink crepe de chine and carried a basket of sweet peas. James Castor, brother of the bride, and Louis J. Smith, were ushers. Samuel D. Scudder, the organ and Eugene Castor, brother of the bride, with the violin, very feelingly rendered appropriate music. The church was most beautifully decorated with pink and white peonies and roses, this work having been done by E. E. Jacob of the Flower Shop. Immediately after the ceremony the families of the bride and groom proceeded to the private dining room at McCabe's on Wall street, where an elaborate wedding dinner was served. After congratulations the happy couple left by auto amid showers of rice and confetti, for a trip through the New England states, and upon their return will reside at No. 28 Hoffman street, where a newly furnished home awaits them. The gifts were many and beautiful, including substantial checks, linen, silverware, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Perry are very popular young people and have the well wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy married life.

WDBZ Silent Wednesday Night

Station WDBZ will not broadcast on Wednesday evening of this week, according to official announcement made by the management. It will be on the air again when somebody has a program.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

WDBZ for some reason not stated again fell down Sunday morning, to the great disappointment of those who have not sent in their $2 contribution. There will be no program from this station Wednesday evening of this week because the "no radio in summer" myth keeps those who had promised programs from making good.

What have the "no radio in summer" folks to say of the strength and clarity of signals from Chicago, Davenport, Cleveland, etc., Saturday night. Sunday night Chicago was as good.

One of the WGY radio sharps says 50 kilowatts is not super power at all and that 500 kilowatts may be used in the near future.

WPG expects to go on 5,000 watts some time in July.

Right now there are half a dozen stations that can be received in daylight on a loud speaker. WDBZ, WAGA, WHN, WFL, WOR, WGY, WJZ, WTIC, WRAF, WJP and WNYC are all daylight stations. Yet the "no radio in summer" myth still lives.

A lot of folks count radio reception success: 1. across the noise; 2. noise—they get. Something that sounds like a boiler shop operating in the middle of the battle of Bull Run is their notion of good radio reception.

President Coolidge's budget message was sent out by so many stations that WBNY, WMSG and WTIC were about the only stations available to those who desired to escape it.

Static, which in various forms prevailed most of the evening, grew rapidly no better at about 10 o'clock and continued so.

"Waffler" sung by the Pennsylvania Revelers, is worthy of a place in a trilogy consisting of "Horses," "Animal Crackers" and "Taff." One of the vagaries of this static-infested atmosphere was the unusually loud volume from eastern stations and from Montreal.

Bird With Four Legs. The discovery in British Guiana of a bird with four legs was announced recently. The creature, opisthocomus crotatus, the only survivor of a race of birds, inhabit the most secluded parts of the forests of South America.

THE LUCK OF LUNDAY

By CHARLES SLOAN REID

(© 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

JERRY LUNDAY mopped the grime of the fields from his brow as, with his long-handled hoe on his shoulder, he came up to the cabin. "Dinged if this thing o' diggin' a livin' out of a rock pile with a goose-neck ain't enough to get the goat of a circuit rider," he complained to his wife at the doorstep.

"I reckon," sighed Martha. "Maybe somethin''ll turn up one o' these days." "If we could sell these forty acres o' rocks and clay, maybe we could do better somewhere else."

"Did ye try Colonel Bascom any more?"

"Yes. The old skintint offered me two hundred dollars. Said he'd pay that much jest to own the place o' dirt Providence dropped in here to keep the river from bein' too wide. The old rat couldn't buy it of me now for a thousand."

After supper Jerry got down an old oil drum from the loft. It was made like an inverted funnel with a bottom in it, and provided with a wick made from several strands of a soft rope.

"Let's go fishin', Martha," he suggested, a little more cheerfully. "I'm a little tired after doin' the week's wash," sighed Martha.

"So'm I after doin' the day's battle with them dinged rocks."

The stream was deep at the spot where Jerry planted his lighted flambeau; and the fishing was good from the start. But Jerry's usual hard luck presently plunged him once more into the depths of melancholy. In landing an especially good catch Jerry's pole somehow dislodged the flambeau and it sank into the stream, leaving them in utter darkness.

"It's no use, Martha; the devil's after me, I reckon!" he complained, as they struggled up the rugged bank. "Maybe not, Jerry; maybe not."

"I hate to lose that old lamp, though."

"You can dive for it sometime, Jerry."

The following day Colonel Bascom and members of his family came down to the river to fish. Jerry Lunday stopped and leaned heavily upon his hoe as he watched the party leave the car and file along down the stream. He looked down at his shoes, through the ends of which protruded his toes, took a hitch in his trousers where one suspender button was missing, spat on his hands, and seized the hoe handle with renewed viciousness.

"Dinged old skintint is going to my best fish hole," he observed testily, as he smote the rocks with the blade of the hoe.

The fishing party did not remain long, and Lunday watched them drive away with satisfaction. Bascom was known as the land grabber of the community, and was as tireless on the trail of a distressed land holder as a hyena on that of a crippled fawn. In the afternoon Bascom came to the river again. This time a single companion, a man, came with him. "Somethin' new for old Bascom to turn fisherman," mused Jerry. "Cling-clang" rattled the hoe among the rocks and occasionally a plant would be cut away by a glancing stroke, causing Lunday to swear with venom. An hour passed, then Jerry was called to the road by Bascom, whose companion proved to be his lawyer. "Lunday, I've decided to buy this piece of land of you," Bascom announced. "I'll double my first offer, making it four hundred. Anybody would say Bascom was giving away his money."

"I reckon you still ain't anxious, Colonel," drawled Lunday indifferently.

"Oh, well!" Bascom waved his hand. "I thought I might like to build a hunting lodge here sometime."

He turned to his car, and Jerry strode back to his hoe and the rocks. When Lunday broke the news of Bascom's new offer to Martha that night she was considerably disturbed.

"I reckon ye've missed yer best chance, Jerry," she declared.

"I don't know. Bascom's got some good reason for offerin' double what he offered before; and I reckon if he wants it that bad he'll make us another offer."

Jerry was not mistaken. But the second offer came from a town lawyer named Judson, and it followed Bascom's offer by just twenty-four hours.

"I've got hold of a little money," prefaced Judson, "and I'd like to put it in land, Lunday. What is your price for this place?"

"I don't know that I've set up any price," admitted Jerry. "What would you give?"

"I believe I'd be willin' to make the price, say, five hundred dollars."

"No doubt, I reckon Bascom told you ye'd have to beat four hundred?"

"Bascom?"

"Bascom, I reckon that little money ye talk about havin' is comin' out o' Bascom's pocket?"

"What makes you think so, Lunday?"

"Well, I been tryin' to sell this place for three years and couldn't get more'n two hundred offered till just now. When Bascom, for some reason, is mighty anxious to buy."

"You're suspicious, Jerry," Judson laughed. "At any rate, make me a price."

"I'll say two thousand dollars, then, Judson. You can ask Bascom what he thinks of that figure."

"Two thousand? You must be dreamin' Lunday."

"No; I've woke up and found out that this place is valuable."

"Look here, Jerry!" Judson put his hand on Lunday's shoulder confidentially. "I'll own up, and tell you that I am actin' for Bascom; and he has instructed me to go as far as a thousand dollars if necessary. I don't know what he wants with it; but what do you say to that?"

"I say two thousand, or no trade, Judson. Old Bascom has found something around here he thinks is valuable, and I reckon he'll get around to my price all right. He must have seen a shily speck in some o' these dinged rocks. But if he's found a gold mine he's welcome to it, when he pays my price."

Judson had to return to his employer for further instructions. Two days passed and nothing further had been heard from the bidder. Jerry and his wife, who had been living in a sort of ecstasy of hope, began to waver. Lunday evidently had allowed a golden opportunity to pass; and visions of those rocky corn fields as an interminable proposition began to crowd his mind.

But his expectancy was aroused once more when, on the third morning after the visit of Judson, the big Bascom car again went down to the river. This time it carried three men who were strangers to the community of Bascomville. With his gaze Lunday surveyed the group from a distance, and put the best of his thinking machinery into action, trying to fathom the mystery of Bascom's recent movements. The visitors remained half an hour. Then Lunday was called to where the car stood waiting.

"You offered to take two thousand dollars for this place, did you not?" Bascom put the question sharply.

"That's my price, Colonel."

"Well, I've decided to take you up," declared Bascom. "I have the deed already prepared, and I'll thank you to sign in the presence of these witnesses. I have brought the currency, so we can close the matter up at once."

"That suits me, Colonel."

Lunday found that the deed had been prepared from the county records and was very comprehensive. For a moment visions of gold nuggets and buried treasure flitted through his brain. Then came the echo of a little refrain which had filled his ears for all these many years, the clanging of the hoe among the rocks in the corn field. He signed the deed; and soon held the money in his hand.

"Now, Jerry," Bascom smiled confidentially. "You thought you were holdin' me up for this worthless old place; and I am going to show you why I bought it. This place on which you have just about grabbed yourself to death is going to be worth millions to me—millions. Do you understand?"

"That's some talk, Colonel," admitted Lunday, grinning, but with a tight clutch upon the bills in his pocket.

Bascom led the way to Lunday's fishing hole. He was in an ecstasy of excitement when he reached the wick's edge.

"There it is now," he shouted, pointing with his long, bony finger toward a single large drop of oil which had bubbled to the surface of the stream, burst, and spread

"Millionaire nothing! Them drops is cozia from an old oil lamp I dropped in that hole the other night."

Bascom sat down with a thud, his face ashen, and he breathed heavily. The oil experts gasped in amazement; while Jerry clutched the roll in his pocket with a firm grip of satisfaction.
